In the midst

At a loss for words, I trace out the way along desire paths, watching my steps to feel out the middle. Like a sigil or a constellation, the diagram forms a moment that is more than the sum of its parts, presenting itself as a composite whirling whole. It's a portal, a doorway and a wormhole; co-dependent elements speak to both themselves, their relationship with their connections, and the ideas that they form. The middle is active; a push and pull that criss-crosses with its potential, ending up with something that is close enough.
